

Burping out loud

Sometimes I burp out loud. When I do this, people tend to look at me and they are not happy to be near me. Burping out loud is rude.

Burping out loud is not a polite thing to do. When I feel like I need to burp, I need to make sure my mouth is closed so the burp will not be heard by people near me. I can also say, “excuse me”. These two things are the polite things to do when burping.

I will try to remember to close my mouth and say, “excuse me” when I burp.

If I burp out loud in public places, people may think I am acting inappropriately. That is not OK. People will not want to be with me when I burp out loud they will feel embarrassed.

Farting in public

Sometimes I fart or pass gas. When I do this, people tend to look at me and they are not happy to be near me and think I am rude. People may laugh me and think I am strange. Farting or passing gas is rude and smells bad to others around me. I should try to go to a private place like the bathroom or away from other people.

Farting is not a polite thing to do. When I feel like I need to fart, I need to try not to. If it accidentally happens, I can say, "excuse me". This is the polite things to do when I fart or pass gas.

I will try not to fart or pass gas when I am around other people.

If I fart or pass gas in public places, people may think I am acting inappropriately. That is not OK. People will not want to be with me when I fart in public places. They will feel embarrassed.